SAT/ACT Planning

Most college baseball coaches suggest taking the SAT/ACT for the first time no later than the end of your junior year of high school. This gives you time to study long enough to improve your score and retake the test during the fall of your senior year without having to rush if you don't like your first score. It's best to plan out the exact study times and test dates in advance so you can meet registration deadlines and give yourself plenty of time to prepare. Your standardized test scores are a big deal for playing college baseball. Plan accordingly!

I plan to start studying for the SAT/ACT on this date: _____

I plan on taking the SAT/ACT for the first time on this testing date: _____
